It is time to start thinking about the back of schools, regardless of whether you are sitting in physical class this year. Apple is again making several offers on its products to students and teachers to get discounts on laptops, tablets, software and accessories. The education discount allows students, school staff, and parents of students to save up to $300 on Mac desktops, $100 on MacBook laptops, $50 on certain iPads, 5-10% on accessories, 50% on Apple Music, and 20% on AppleCare+ device protection. If you buy a Mac or iPad, you'll also get airpods for free. If you're eligible for student pricing and don't see discounted prices, you'll need to go to Apple's back-to-school website first. Unfortunately, Apple has no end date for this campaign. The company only notes that free AirPods with Mac or iPad purchases are only available for as long as the supplies last. So it would be smart to act quickly if you want to take advantage of this free. Find this year's best Apple school deals below or buy all of Apple's training deals here. Updated 7/6/20 Joe Osborne: Added Apple deals for 2020 and checked all links for accuracy. Also updated with information about Apple's free AirPods campaign for training customers. Hollis Johnson/Business Insider Want to buy a Mac or iPad for school? You might as well get a free pair of AirPods when you make a purchase. If you buy a Mac or iPad Pro from Apple, you'll get AirPods wireless. Apple specifically includes original AirPods (no wireless charging case) for free with these purchases while supplies last, which is worth $159.00. If you want to update this campaign, you can get the same value for AirPods with a wireless charging case (for just $40) or AirPods Pro (for just $90). Students can also get a deal on an Apple Music subscription. For the first three months, Apple Music is free, and after the original episode, you pay a special student fee of $4.99 per month for savings of $5 per month.
